New York-based Kensington Vanguard National Land Services, a title and insurance company, has acquired a Colorado company with offices in Boulder and Longmont.

Kensington Vanguard has acquired Core Title, a title insurance provider. The acquisition is part of the company's national expansion. The company also plans to open a new office in Fort Collins.

The Core Title offices will operate under the Kensington Vanguard brand and Anthony Knight, founder of Core, has been named executive vice president, Rocky Mountain Region and will oversee the Colorado operations.

"Given excellent fundamentals, including strong population growth, a divers economy and a robust real estate market, we've been highly focused on entering the Colorado market," said Brian Cooper, co-CEO of Kensington Vanguard. "With the consummation of this acquisition, we're excited to now have the Core Title team leading our efforts on the ground."

Kensington Vanguard operates three divisions: commercial, residential and 1031 exchange services. The company also has offices in Florida, New Jersey, Virginia and Texas. The firm is one of the largest in the country following the 2008 merger of Kensington National Land Services LLC and Vanguard Title Agency Inc.
